Sir:

INFORMATION DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Applicant wishes to make the following patents of record in accordance with 37 CFR 1.97.

Johnsen et al, U. S. Patent No. 4,791,281 discloses a system wherein each of the coupons, 10, contains a plurality of codes which are decoded by a decoding machine and compares the information on each coupon with like information stored in the merchant's computer system. Thus, each discount must be claimed by producing the individual coupon assigned for the product for which the discount is sought. This is in contrast with the present invention where a single code imprinted upon a single distribution medium identifies discounts for an entire line of products.

Tai, U. S. Patent No. 4,908,761 discloses providing potential consumers with a plurality of coupons and at least one, and preferably several, customer activated encoding devices, each of which must be attached to the coupon which is redeemed by the customer.

Ono et al, U. S. Patent No. 5,013,896 discloses a check-out system for items in a supermarket or like business without the need of a cashier or like clerk.

Humble, U. S. Patent No. 4,949,256 discloses a system drawn to a coupon validation network for automatically processing product coupons which are presented for redemption by customers. The system in one embodiment provides each customer with an identification card having a magnetic strip or the like which identifies the customer and provides access to the customer's coupon account. Coupons are nevertheless required to be fed into a coupon reader for adding corresponding coupon credits to the customer's coupon account.

Nichtberger et al, U. S. Patent No. 4,882,675 provides cents off merchandise coupons which are distributed and redeemed electronically. An electronic display of coupons valid for use in a particular store is presented in the store to the consumer. The consumer makes a selection of coupons from the display and the selection is recorded. The consumer is subsequently identified at a checkout station as the one who has made the selection. Identification may be made by scanning a special card adapted for use with this system, but the special card identifying the customer must be applied for and processed by the merchant before it is used.

May, U. S. Patent No. 4,839,507, discloses a method and machine for verifying or validating coupons wherein a dispensing machine is provided and has an inlet into which coupons are inserted and an outlet through which a predetermined number or amounts of coin can be dispensed.

Pusic, U. S. Patent No. 5,065,000 discloses a system which includes an automatic electronically controlled postage meter which receives a magnetic IC card provided in order to allow for payment by debits, credit or IC card in addition to payment by cash or check.

Sloan et al, U. S. Patent No. 5,146,067 discloses a system and method for dispensing utilities using magnetic striped cards whereby a value message is written onto a mag-stripe card and contains information relating to the amount of utilities purchased by the consumer, the utility rates and identification number, etc.

Pfeiffer et al, U. S. Patent No. 5,198,644 discloses a price display whereby LCD displays are attached to store shelves and each includes a receiver which receives a transmitted signal broadcasting prices related to the items sold.

Applicant has by the foregoing complied with the requirements of 37 CFR 1.97 and has listed the above patents of this information disclosure statement on the accompanying PTO 1449 Form.

Applicant has filed this information disclosure statement prior to the issuance of any action in this case, and therefore no fee is deemed necessary. However, please charge our deposit account No. 03-3355 any fee necessitated by the filing of this Information Disclosure Statement.

Respectfully,

VICTOR A. OVADIA
